she locked the door and went to her car, but then she heard some weird noises from her house. she was confused because she was living alone and nobody had keys to enter her place. Her first thought was is to call the police immediately, but something was stopping her. she became the bravest young lady in her own mind. she grabbed her keys and it was a knight's move and went straightaway to the door. Door was opened very quiet and gentle. there were lights. Our main character went to the rooftop with the help of ladder. Her blood was boiling in veins and breath was shaky. But the most funny part of the story is about who made those noises. She found a nest full of bird eggs. But a mother-bird wasn't there. she left them for finding their food or just left them? We would never know. But our character gently took the nest with those little yellowish eggs. (they also had black spots and dots, they looked like cow eggs). she took some left towels and blankets, ~~and~~ covered the door and went to her car. she placed the nest on the seat near the driver's sit, wrapped the nest with towels like the best mother ever. she started driving to the town to see local vet-clinic. Weather was awful. It was raining, road was wet and actually news report was saying not to drive today because it can cause a lot of problems. Our main character looked like the bravest mother ever, despite the fact that she only was 18 and never knew how to be a mother. Her journey to vet clinic was happily ended happily. Vet-clinic accepted her immediately because there wasn't any line. she hoped if this young and brave girl can reach us, how can important to be a mother.
